A group of approximately ten children and one adult are gathered around a wooden table in a classroom. They are all focused on a project involving several sheets of pink paper laid out on the table. The children, of various ages, are reaching out to touch or move the papers. The adult, a woman with dark hair, is also leaning over the table, participating in the activity. The background shows a typical classroom setting with shelves, a whiteboard, and other students working at their desks.
